Tomato Seeds in india

GreenHouse Culture

To grow tomato seeds in heated greenhouses sow January onwards, in a temperature of 16-18°C (60-65°F).

Transplant into small pots. Plant out in large pots, growing bags, or into a soil border at 45cm (18") spacing.

Pinch out side shoots regularly and when in flower tap or shake plants daily to aid setting. For growing in unheated greenhouses, sow in warmth, from March onwards. Plant late April-early May. Harvest mid August-mid October.

Fruits firm skinned, thus suitable for long distance transportation. Resistant to Verticillium wilt, Fusarium wilt, root knot nematodes. Yield 30-40 tonnes per acre.

Environmental factors affecting the length of the style.

Professor Messiaen, in his excellent work "Le Potager Tropical" makes the observation that tomatoes grown in the tropics have the tendency to have a longer style. It would seem in fact that the elongation of the style is caused by solar intensity, the length of the days and the ratio of carbon to nitrogen. In areas that are not susceptible to cross pollination, that is to say the major part of the temperate zone, one can expect between 2 and 5% natural hybridisation.
